In Tampa police Maj. Sophia Teague's heart, no four-legged friend will ever replace Jimbo, the department bloodhound she trained and raised in her rural Hillsborough home. Jimbo, 5, died in November. "I still miss going home in the afternoon and being with him," Teague said. But Tuesday, Tampa police got a new bloodhound puppy - and Teague got a new friend. Child Protection Education of America and the Jimmy Ryce Bloodhound Network donated the 8-week-old dog to the department for use in tracking missing children and other victims and suspects. The puppy doesn't have a name yet, but Teague said that will come with time. "This puppy, I think he'll be the healing for my heartbreak." Then the puppy licked her cheek. And her face lit up.
